

store which she conducted, but said that Mr. Weinthal, who now conducts a Detective Agency in Newark might remember it, and may be able to furnish some valuable information. He then related the story of how Kesserling obtained his divorce on the grounds that Subject ran around with a man named Frances (first name unknown), who operated a large lumber yard at Newark Ave. and Wellock St. He was well known about town and owned several race horses and had plenty of money. He furnished the bail for Rose Gleitzman when she was arrested. Mr. Frances is dead a number of years and his business does not exist at present. Mr. Frances was named as the corespondent in their divorce action. He stated that Rose Gleitzman's arrest will show a lot about May Ray. Mr. Messingkop had to return to the bank this evening and had to end my interview with him.

Operative then went to Police Headquarters, but was unable to search the records there, as the man in charge leaves at 5 P.M. Will return there to-morrow.

Respectfully submitted:
